WHERE LEADERS COME TO LEARN

Our growth and development as leaders depends heavily upon who we surround ourselves with, the exposure we have to new information and perspectives, and most importantly, the new things we try in our roles. Come join an environment that brings all these core development pieces into one convenient package. The Leadership Series® is where your development experience is Automatic, Accessible, Relevant, and Connected.

- Automatic – Turn-key growth and development for your team you can count on...let us do the work!
- Accessible – Exposure to top-notch, high quality speakers.
- Relevant – Fresh content and new takes on well-known topics that are top-of-mind in today’s business world.
- Connected – Rub elbows with some of the most prominent organizations in the Denver business community.

WHO WE SERVE

If Not You, Who? How to Crack the Code of Employee Disengagement
Organizations that excel at employee engagement outperform their peers by a wide, wide margin. How, then, can an organization and its leaders do what so many others can’t and keep their people engaged? The answer lies in best-selling author Jill Christensen’s proven strategies for turning disinterested workers into unified, motivated high-performers who are ready, willing and able to provide the discretionary effort that organizations depend on to flourish.

The Power of Habit
The key to coaxing higher performance out of yourself and your teams, and gaining better control over long-term outcomes, on the job and otherwise? Habits. Under master trainer Scott Robley, you’ll learn how to apply the science of habit-formation to develop effective, reliable habits in yourself and others, using skills instead of willpower. Efficiency, agility, creativity, compliance, growth — all these critical business traits are a function of habit. Robley arms leaders with the skillset to develop and map the habits that unlock those traits across an organization.

Diversity and Inclusion: Building a Culture of Belonging
High-performing leaders, teams and organizations, those for which people consistently do their best work, thrive because they have built a culture of inclusion, authenticity and diversity. Heather R Younger — AKA the “the Employee Whisperer” — equips leaders with specific skills to nurture that kind of culture by ensuring every employee feels valued, respected and supported. Diversity of ideas could well be your most valuable untapped asset, and Younger shows leaders how to maximize it by honoring their employees’ unique experiences and perspectives.

Joseph Grenny • June 29
Influence, Inspire and Change Lives
In a world where leaders are measured as much by how rapidly and successfully they can engineer change as by the performance of their teams and organizations, Joseph Grenny has spent the last three decades showing them how to excel at both. Using the six sources of influence that in Grenny’s research have proven to work best at producing positive change in behavior, leaders learn how to become true change agents and catalysts for higher performance inside their organizations — and in the community.

Maria Brito • September 14
Creating The Future
From the intersection of business and art, Maria Brito paints a compelling picture for leaders, showing them how to harness the forces of creativity and imagination inside their organizations to cultivate a consistent, renewable stream of ideas that produce remarkable results — no special artistic skills required. Drawing from her work with some of the world’s foremost artists, along with her deep business experience, Brito delivers unique insights about how organizations can use creativity to build a sustained competitive advantage, even in the face of uncertainty.

The Life-Changing Science of Detecting Workplace BS
Enough already. For too long, we’ve put up with BS and the damage it causes in the workplace. Now, with the help of social psychologist Dr. John V. Petrocelli and his groundbreaking research into the causes and consequences of BS and BSing, we can learn to detect and dispose of it — before it stinks up the workplace. An expert in the science of communication, Dr. Petrocelli details how to rid the workplace of BS and those who sling it, and build an evidence-based organizational culture where honesty and trust prevail.

Creating an Authentic Servant Leadership Culture
In a digitally distracted, pandemic-disrupted world, the connection between purposeful leadership skills and hard results has never been stronger. A progressive thinker and dynamic speaker whose ideas resonate equally in the public and private sectors, Ron Holifield is here to serve leaders, teaching them how to elevate people and teams to new performance heights, simply by applying the principals of servant leadership and acting authentically in the service of others.
